The Pittsburgh Ballet Theatre and the Holocaust Center of the United Jewish Federation raised the curtain for more than 300 during a special opening night performance of Light/The Holocaust & Humanity Project at the Byham Theater on Thursday.

The largest collaborative project in PBT history, the concept stemmed from a casual conversation between PBT director Harris Ferris and HC prez Hal Waldman, an idea to turn a ballet into a community collaboration that soon garnered the support of Ballet Austin director Cookie Ruiz and Artistic Director Stephen Mills.

A pre-show tribute at the Renaissance gave supporters including honorary co-chairs Charles Porter and Hilary Tyson, Artistic Director Terrence Orr, HC board prez Dave Sufrin, Dr. Edie Naveh, Norma Sobel, Peggy McKnight, Lisa Kennedy, and Melanie and Jim Crockard the opportunity to meet and speak with 50 Holocaust survivors before settling into the theater to watch a moving performance that explores the universal themes of family, segregation, isolation, survival and hope.
